II. The cooperation with Read to Grow.

2.1.1 About the signing of an agreement when you receive the books.

The books, which you will receive for your project, at no cost after approval, are a gift from the heart from many children and adults. Read to Grow, its donors and all people concerned would like to see that these books are handled properly and with care. That is why Read to Grow asks you to sign this agreement upon receipt of the books for your project. With your signature, you declare that your organization will meet all the criteria stated below.

- Your organization will send a letter confirming the receipt of books, signed by the local management of the project (for instance: a signature of the director of the school which has received the books).
- In addition, your organization will send a minimum of 5 pictures, still or live, showing the books and the receivers. Read to Grow is authorized to use this material to illustrate to those concerned, what actually happens with the books.
- Your organization will see to it that, under no circumstance, the books fall into the hands of a commercial party.
- Your organization will see to it that the books are handled properly and are placed in a separate area in bookcases.
- Your organization will see to it that the books are, as much as possible, accessible to the target group. In case the books cannot be loaned, a reading area must be provided for with tables and chairs.
- Your organization will see to it that the books will not be loaned in case there is a risk that they will not be returned.

Read to Grow will only continue its cooperation with your organization when you are able to show, after arrival of the books, that your organization has met all of the above-mentioned criteria.
